

I am writing to oppose further deregulation of media outlets. Radio and tv are far too monolithic as it is. Allowing corporate giants like Clear Channel to gobble up more stations will eliminate any diversity of opinion and artistry that still exists out there. The air waves belong to the people, not corporations. Deregulation is not in the best interest of the people. We want more choice in programming and programming that is local in nature. At the very least, the public comment time period should be extended.
